Sea Witch

Physiology

They are very similar to merpeople so much that they can pass for one. Their difference lies in their ability to use magic. It can be said that in the underwater world, they are almost like a Source for humans and other races.

Abilities

Fucusyas seem to fill a role analogous to Nordling and Nilfgaardian magic users. These marine sorceresses are highly esteemed by other inhabitants of the sea and are reportedly more skilled than human mages in terms of mutating or transforming living creatures: they can change a human into mereperson or otherwise without a pain which would occur when a human mage does a similar attempt. Because of this, they possess the ability to change shape, with ease, being the "envy" among human sorceresses who practice polymorphism.

Behaviors

Their behavior with surface beings is largely unknown, with other marine beings, it is known that it is adequate since they form a society together with the nereids,merpeople, tritons and other creatures ( depending on the region ) are enemies of the Cecaelia, but the real reasons are not known, some say that because supposedly, they were created by the Sea Witches to aid them, but over time, they rebelled against their creators.

Known Sea Witches

- Laminea
- Nysaniassi
- Kelapea
- Aramine
- Pheroreanes
- Himeles
- Calylis

Trivia

- The sea witches were the creators of the nixas, to use them as a defense against humans but their creation, it got out of hand.
- The subspecies referred to in this article, are subspecies also for the merpeople.
